Great tasting jerky comes from these lean breeds, including today's GK Jerky. Roughly one hundred fifteen miles separate the goldfields of Bannack from the golden grasslands of the Deer Lodge Valley, but their shared history places them much closer in the saga of Montana's gold rush and the open range cattle era.

During 1862, Hank Crawford, Montana's first territorial sheriff, hired Conrad Kohrs to drive three heifers from Johnny Grant's ranch in Deer Lodge to Bannack where Crawford owned a butcher shop. Ultimately Kohrs came to own the meat shop and the cattle ranch in Deer Lodge. And so the story began, the link between some of the richest gold deposits in Montana, the miners who worked it, and the cowboys who drove the cattle that were raised on some of the best grasses anywhere in the west.

To better understand the history and the significance of the western expansion, please visit both Bannack State Park and Grant-Kohrs Ranch National Historic Site.

SOURCE: FY2011

Where does the $6.00 vehicle registration fee go?
